UFS ZFS (Zettabyte File System) is a file system that was launched by Sun Microsystems for the Solaris operating system in 2004. It was designed by Dean G. Chesnell, Tan Le, and others and was first developed for the Sun Microsystems' ZFS Oracle Enterprise Edition, which was released in 2008. Prior to the release of ZFS, Sun had planned to release a file system, based on the FUSE (Filesystem in Userspace) project, named Fire-Fly. It would have allowed Windows applications to access the file system over the Network File System (NFS) protocol using the SMB (Server Message Block) protocol.
