Once per turn, a player can give his king (i.e. an unnecessary action) to try and get a card in the hand of the king. For example, if a player has a king, bishop and knight, and the king is to the left of the opponent, the player might pretend to take the knight but give the king to his opponent to try and get a card in the hand of the king. Can anyone think of a rule, or a good move, by which the king can force the opponent to give him a card in his hand? I tried to think of an interesting way to give away your king, but I couldn't think of anything good. Any ideas?
